The international press is enjoying another Roosevelt-Churchill field day, but the really vital war news has them pretty well stymied. It seems to me it would be a swell idea to leave the war to the generals — Eisenhower, Montgomery, MacArthur, Anderson et al, including the three-star strategists who have also contributed so much to the successes so far achieved by the allies. Not only are these men better able to plan the actual campaigns, but, it seems to me, they are able diplomats as well. The fusing of English, Canadian, Free French, and American arms in the African and Sicilian campaigns was an example of tact seldom if ever equaled, and General Dwight Eisenhower carried not only responsibility for the final result; it required exceptional technique in diplomacy not only in his dealings with his allies—several of whom outranked him at the start—and the ability to set the conquered and liberated peoples at ease and with full knowledge of what to expect from the allies. Yes, I believe Mr. Churchill could use his admirable talents on the home front, and the same may be said for President Roosevelt. In Washington there are surely plenty of things to occupy the attention of the Chief Executive—fairly important things such as the stabilization of food prices. Any housewife will assure you that achievements along this line to date are strictly myhtical; they would prefer actualities — as who wouldn't. There are many other problems facing the nation, and it is time for statesmanship—if any we have—and not too much column one, front page, mixed up with it. The people will recognize it when they see it, and it's a long time arriving.

We've all heard a great deal about the surplus help situation in Pacific coast shipyards, and about the dissatisfaction among the help arising out of this condition. It's difficult to pin a shipyard worker down to the facts, and if you can do it you're never sure the facts are not distorted to suit the mood of the narrator. I renewed acquaintance with a young fellow this week—chap I've not seen for over a year. Well, he's been working in a shipyard. Travels a hundred miles a day to and from work and, he said, he spends half his time waiting around for something to do. He doesn't mind the trip, but it gripes him to stand around with his hands in his pockets. And, while there are always some who feel the less work they can do the better, I believe the majority would rather be busy. Anyway, this young fellow is trying vainly to get a clearance from the yard. He has a job lined up in San Jose where they guarantee to keep him on the jump the entire shift on war production. Why won't the yard release him? He hasn't been able to get a satisfactory answer, and he consequently lays it to the "cost plus" system. "The bigger the payroll," he said, "the more dough for the yard." That's putting it bluntly, and it's not, perhaps, very good propaganda. If such conditions do exist, however, it's time to drag them out into the open. The day of reckoning is not far distant, and we are all going to be billed for our share.

Youth Wins Appointment

Louis Hughes, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Hughes, although only 16 years old, has won an appointment as a model plane maker on the staff of the Ames laboratory at Moffett Feild.

Some red tape had to be overcome on account of the youths age, but his exceptional skill in production of models of every kind finally won him his chance.

He will return to classes at the Campbell Union High school, but spend week-ends making model planes for his country.

Ladies Honored at Kiwanis Meeting Tuesday Evening

The Campbell Kiwanis club held its second ladies night meeting of the summer Tuesday evening with Lt. Col Robinson, commanding officer of the Army specialized training at the University of Santa Clara, as the speaker of the evening.

President Williard H. Van Dyke opened the meeting, greeting the members and visitors and passed the gavel to Dr. W. I. Merrill who was chairman of the evening.

The speaker, Col. Robinson, related the requirements to be met at the University under the military training, stating that it was a concentrated course covering subjects vital to the war effort, having for its purpose the shortening of the regular courses into half the normal time. He also recommended the beginning of most of these courses in the high school curriculum, stressing, particularly, mathematics in all its branches.

Next week the Campbell club will journey to the Hotel Lyndon in Los Gatos for a meeting with the Los Gatos Rotary club. This meeting will be held Tuesday noon and cars from Campbell will leave the library building at 12 o'clock sharp.

Out of town guests in attendance were Mrs. Beth Parsons, Portland, Me., sister of Budd Levenberg, Mrs. Helen Cooley, Cobbleskille, N. Y., sister of Mrs. Don Baldwin, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Buell of San Jose.

Campbell High School to Have Cadet Corps

Principal W. H. Van Dyke states that there will be a cadet corps in the Campbell high school this year. Details of the project are to be worked out at a meeting in early September of high school principals in this pre-flight area which includes several counties.

The inauguration of these corps in high schools where there are 100 or more boys in attendance was provided in a law passed by the last legislature.

Participation by the boys will not be compulsory, but valuable knowledge of many branches will be given in addition to some drill.

Instructors will be certified by the adjutant general at Sacramento.

Sgt. George Thomas Smith, Jr., is home for 10 days visiting his parents Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Smith. Sgt. Smith leaves tomorrow morning for Rapid City, S. D., where he is a member of a bomber squadron, being a radio operator and gunner on a B-17.

OBSERVATION POST ITEMS

A great part of this World War is being fought by means of fighter aircraft, and our Army is taking every precaution to be able to definitely identify all planes, friendly or enemy, that fly over our land.

Air defense is the direct defense against enemy air operations. The Ground Observer Corps is a part of the Army Air Force, and therefore, is an essential part of air defense.

It is the aircraft warning service, manned twenty-four hours a day by volunteer civilian observers, who report their findings by telephone directly to the Army Filter center under Army supervision.

The Ground Observers of Campbell, under the direction of Chief Observer C. P. Klassen, have been doing an excellent job, but it would be much easier on the observers if more civilians would volunteer their service—we need you. Come and do your part.

More and more planes are in the air, and many telephone calls have complicated the work at the Army Filter Center board.

The Army has asked observers to identify trainer aircraft, transports and fighter aircraft when possible, and in due time we will be asked to eliminate many calls. In order to do this identification efficiently, it seems quite necessary for the Corps to own a pair of binoculars. This is being financed by the observed and your donation before Sept. 1 will be glady received by Mr. Klassen, Mrs. Ralph Hyde, D. H. Cramer, or at the Campbell Water company office by Jack Murdock.

T. A. Cutting has been conducting a school of identification of planes with the use of card pictures and a pro-

Private Industry is Jobs, Liberty, Opportunity

Tom Girdler, leading steel man and now an outstanding aviation executive, recently declared that: "Unless the tax laws are modified to take into account rehabilitation needs and creation of reserves, then when the war is over there are going to be many distressed plants." The same opinion has been repeated time and again. But the men who have expressed it invariably make one grave mistake. They expect the public to be concerned over "distressed plants," before they hammer home the eternal truth that the public actually has a greater interest in the plants than the owners, for the very simple reason that such plants contribute to private employment, stable prosperity, and are essential to the operation of representative government.

No one cares particularly what happens to industry from the standpoint of industry itself. But everyone should care immensely what happens to industry once it is clearly understood the part industry—free, private industry—plays in maintaining an economic and political system which guarantees liberty and equal opportunity to the individual citizen.

Private industry is the primary source of jobs. It keeps the door of opportunity open to millions of American citizens. It rewards those who work and produce. It does not interfere with political convictions. As a result, our people are the most independent people in the world. They will retain their independence only if they retain private industry.

Due to the war, nearly one-fifth of the productive capacity of this country is now owned outright by the Government. In plain words, a fifth of the industry is already socialized. When the war is over this area of socialism will either expand or be gradually replaced by private ownership. If it is not replaced by private ownership, the American people will eventually lose their freedom. They will work for a single monopolistic employer, the Government. A gang of bureaucrats will demand political allegiance as the price of a job.

The public must eventually recognize these truths, just as it must recognize that when a plea is made by a business man in favor of post-war rehabilitation reserves, he is talking about something that involves the future of the nation— not just an industry bank book.

Panama Canal

August 15 marked the 29th year since the opening of the Panama Canal. It still stands as one of the engineering triumphs of modern times. Interestingly enough, although the idea of a canal across the Isthmus of Panama was discussed as far back as 1550, nearly four centuries passed before it became a reality.

Today this waterway is a vital link in our chain of defense. In a war being waged on a global basis, in which distance and time are frequently our enemies, we can imagine what it would mean if our ships had to go "round the Horn" in their travels. This would mean 7,800 more nautical miles between the pacific Coast and New York.

Totat cost in building the canal was $366 million. That's one instance in which we got a real bargain.

OPA Simplicity

The OPA has made it clear that in the future it will give extreme care to the devising of its regulations and will make them as simple as possible.

We hope that this does not follow the style of a recent "simplifying" revision in the bakery products code. Here it is, "All commodities listed in Appendix A are those known to the trade as such excepting therefrom such thereof, if any, while subject to another regulation." What could be simpler?

As to the use of greater care in devising regulations, this will be welcome news to the food industry all the way from producers to retailers, whose collective heads have been spinning from the merry-go-round of orders, instructions, and directives that have whirled about them.

Up to the present, there have been 29 maximum price regulations of foods sold at retail, and 60 price regulations applying to food back of the retail level. Ten ration orders affecting food distributors have been issued. General Maximum Price Regulations has been amended more than 50 times. At least 15 supplementary orders have been issued and one of these has been amended more than 160 times!

The miracle of it all is that we're still eating.

Morale, Not Morals

Remember the high school youngster who shocked his elders with the names and slogans painted on his cut-down Ford?

Well, he's at it again. Only this time he's painting names on the nose of the bombing plane he's piloting in powerful raids on enemy territory—devastating raids such as those on Hamburg and Nuremburg.

A group of Washington dignitaries, recently visiting a bomber base in England, found some of the designations "somewhat offensive" for mixed company. And as a result, Germany, Italy and Japan no longer will be bombed by planes named "Lord Cesspool" or "Naked Nelly"—at least not while the censors are looking.

We remember very well some of those local youngsters who in peacetime raced around in their gaudy, "souped up" cars, placarded with all manner of ridiculous, unrefined words and phrases.

Today we see their names in the war dispatches from abroad where they risk their lives in pitched battles with the enemy. Today those reckless kids are precision-trained, top-flight men of war, many of them heroes.

To their own officers their fantastically decorated and nicknamed planes are indications of high morale, unquenchable even under the greatest strain and reavies responsibility that war can produce.

But to us here at home it's evidence that our boys —fighting men though they must be—are still the boys we knew. It's proof that the kids haven't abandoned high spirits and gay mischief, but have taken them along into the somber world of blood and battle —and with the help of Providence, will bring them back.

As if the War Labor Board didn't have enough trouble already! Now comes a real problem. A certain young lady of 13 years, whose father had informed her that he couldn't raise her allowance without the permission of the WLB, is petitioning that august body for an increase from $1.00 every two weeks to $1.10.

Now the Board must decide if this will violate the "Little Steel" formula and thereby upset the nation's apple-cart. Their decision—favorable or otherwise—will be fraught with potential dangers. Suppose the WLB says "yes." Every youngster in the land might demand an increase, plunging many parents into the "red." Suppose the answer is "no." The adolescent army might picket their parents.

The Board faces the acid test. Page King Solomon!

Everyone knows that the San Francisco-Oakland Bay bridge has been a boon to the motorist and now it is becoming apparent that it is a huge financial success as well. The $77,000,000 structure's fiscal program, calling for repayment of outstanding revenue bonds in 40 years, required that only $2,580,000 be repaid by this time. Actually, according to State Director of Public Works Charles H. Purcell, "father of the bay bridge," nearly $15,000,000 has been paid off, thus bringing closer the day when the bridge will be toll-free, well ahead of schedule.

Quoted from a letter...

"My conscience hurts me today.

"When I was washing up before getting off the train this morning, I learned that six sailors and three soldiers had sat up all night. These men were making this trip under orders—yet there was no sleeping space available for them.

"When I think of the effort you of Southern Pacific, along with other railroads, are making to care for our service men—and then remember that I obtained a berth that should have gone to a service man—it humiliates me. I was due back for a War Bond meeting today and at the time it seemed important. But compared with taking accommodations away from soldiers and sailors my presence here was highly unessential.

"It has been a good lesson for me. Hereafter I shall travel only when I know I'm not depriving service men of sleeping space . . ."

How's YOUR conscience today?

The letter quoted here came from a western newspaper editor and publisher. This man has a conscience that can't be lulled to sleep by easy self-reassurances.

We hope many other prospective travelers will listen to the "still small voice" of their conscience when it asks questions like these:

How much business and how much pleasure are involved in the train trip I plan? Is it really important for me to visit those relatives back East this war year? Couldn't I get just as much rest and relaxation a little closer to home?

Today the railroad is hard-pressed to find space for essential travelers: People whose trip must be made to keep business and war production going . . . Service men on well-deserved furloughs, possibly the last before combat duty . . . Parents going to visit their son when the latter can't get away from his post. When people travel for pleasure, or other non-essential reasons, they prevent such deserving travelers from getting on the train. Yes, we sincerely mean it when we say: "Don't take the train unless your trip is really NECESSARY."

Congregational Church Notes
J. H. Bennett, Pastor

Owing to the inability of Rev. Joyce Farr to preach this Sunday morning at 11 a. m. at the Union Worship service the pastor of the church, Rev. J. H. Bennett, will continue to give the messages for this month. Sunday school in both churches will be as usual.

The Congregational youth will meet at the home of Howard Smith for a picnic dinner Sunday evening to give the group a chance to wish Jack Smith, a member of the group a farewell on leaving for southern California to work in an aviation factory.

In his remarks to the assembled congregation last Sunday morning, the Rev. J. H. Bennett, speaking for himself and others, asked that friends volunteer to carry on the work at the observation post so as to give those who are working in the factories and in other war work, a chance to be free from those duties for at least a few weeks.

THE BOOK MARK

MYSTERY WEEK

It is but a short time since we reported on the new mystery thrillers in this column, but such an exciting bunch of them came into the library this week that to keep mum about them would be MURDER!

Without Lawful Authority by Manning Coles, is a Crime Club Selection. And to add more importance to the book, it was written by the author of such successes as "Drink to Yesterday" and "Toast to Tomorrow." Like its predecessors, "Without Lawful Authority" deals in spies and sabotage work. This time the scene of action is in the Wilhelmstrasse vicinity. This book is distinguished by its superior humor and amusing interplay among shrewd and clever people.

Penhallow by Georgette Heyer is a tale of the English countryside and involves several generations of prominent families — families moneyed and titled. The reader is immediately caught up in an atmosphere of suspense, of brooding tension which foretells disaster and violence.

The Female of the Species The Great Women Detectives and Criminals, edited by Ellery Queen. Here is a volume of short stories, detective and mystery. "When the world was born," says Ellery in his introduction to this book, "Man came first and Woman second. God so ordained. When the Detective in fiction was born, Man again came first and Woman second—so Man himself ordained." So was it also with the female criminal. Quoting from Ellery again, "Again obeying the primeval laws of lature—though less laggard, let it be noted, in matters pertaining to sin—Woman came second. In all these years no one has collected in one "feminology" the best exploits of our many distaff detectives, matronly murderesses, and petticoat pilferers." Thus Mr. Queen explains this fascinating collection of thrillers.

Colour Scheme by Ngaio Marsh. This week's edition of the New York Herald Tribune Book Reviews shows this book on the list of "What America Is Reading" already and it has been off the press but a short time. In making a hasty remark about the story, I would say it is a parallel with "The Uninvited" or perhaps even "Rebecca."

Irene

When Irene got home from the airplane factory she was good and tired. This was the hour, after work and before dinner, that she always looked forward to. Her private name for it was "My sissy hour." Into it, these days, she packed all the lazy, luxurious little things she loved—things that used to take up a lot more than an hour of her peace-time days.

She sat down at the little desk in her room. You could tell quite a lot about Irene from that desk. The water-glass filled with the small bouquet of flowers she sometimes bought on the way home. The paper-weight of pink marble. The thin, crackly blue air-mail stationery. And the big, framed photograph of a young man in a corporal's uniform—as good-looking a man as Irene was pretty. On the blotter pad lay the telegram that had come that morning just as she was leaving for work.

With those long, well-shaped fingers she reached for a sheet of paper. She nibbled the end of her pen for a bit, and then she wrinkled up her nose at the picture of the soldier and began to write, "Dear Mr. Morgenthau", but the corporal's name was Jackson and she called him Pete. Her round handwriting spread across the page. "My boy friend is with the A.E.F. in Ireland. He has cabled me fifty dollars with which to buy a diamond ring. I've been thinking it over and decided to buy a War Bond to help Uncle Sam instead. This may help to bring my boy friend home sooner, and then he can help me select my ring."

Slowly she began to sign her name. "Irene ——" jector to show these pictures on a screen. He has given much of his time to instruct all observers and deserves a "thank you" for his efforts from the community.

Mrs. Sue Boyce

Contributions for binoculars to be used at the Campbell observation post may be left with Jack Murdock at the Campbell Water comapny office. Observers at the post find a real need for a pair and decided to contribute to a fund. Any donations from people who are unable to serve will also be very welcome.

The erection of a tower for observation is still keenly desired and it is hoped that some plan may be evolved to make one possible, and then the citizenry will be asked for their financial support.

AN EARLY CHRISTMAS

The Post Office Department has designated Sept. 15 to Oct. 15 as the only period for mailing parcel post Christmas gifts to Army personnel overseas, and Sept. 15 to Nov. 1 for mailing gifts to Navy personnel.

Parcel post packages will not be accepted at post offices after these deadlines, unless accompanied by requests from addressees. Postal patrons are asked to indorse each gift parcel with the words, "Christmas Parcel," so that it may receive special attention.

AMERICAN HEROES
BY LEFF

Beneath the relentless hail of bombs in a Japanese air attack in the Pacific, Private William C. Hamby, QMC, drove nurses and wounded to the hospital and went back again and again to bring in more of the injured. He made seven trips in all and won the Distinguished Service Cross. How many Third War Loan Bonds can you yourself afford, to match those seven trips of Private Hamby?

Your Gas Water Heater has a BIG JOB to do —take care of it

Vacations are certain to be curtailed items this summer. There will be added garden and housework to attend to and water sports may be restricted to the bathtub, shower and washing machine.

Which raises this question: "When was the last time you gave your faithful, dependable, hard-working water heater some personal attention and care?"

Summer is the time to attend to your water heater because summer is the time when your household demands its greatest use of hot water. And here is what to do: 1. Drain your water heater tank of sediment. 2. Brush the burner clean and clear of dust and dirt. 3. Touch up exposed flue and connections with paint or oil to prevent corrosion. 4. If special trouble develops call in a service man for a check-up.
